Dear Sir:

Subject: Account No. 67543
We have waited for you to pay the balance of $575 which is three months overdue. We have written to you several times without any reply. We have also tried to contact you by other means, but again without success.

If we do not receive the total of $575 due on your account by 10 November 1997, we shall have to ask our lawyer to collect it through legal action.

We prefer to avoid legal action, but you leave us no choice unless you pay the entire amount due of $575.

Sincerely,

Activity 4 B

I. Board meetings are usually held monthly. The board of directors meets under its chairman (or perhaps we should say chairperson) to discuss the major affairs of the company, and plan its future development. There will usually be present, with the chairman, the managing director and a number of full time executive directors, including the marketing director, the production director (factory manager), the chief accountant and the personnel director. Finally, there will usually be a number of part-time non-executive directors. The term ‘non-executive’ implies that they play no part in the actual operations of the company but are present to give advice to the board on matters within their field of expertise. Thus there might be a banker, a lawyer, or a technical expert to do with the company’s activities. Very often one of the non-executive directors will act as deputy chairperson, should the chairperson be absent for any reason.

II. The basis of the meeting is the ‘agenda’, drawn up beforehand by the secretary after consultation with the chairperson. There are certain items that form the framework of the agenda. These are explained later in more detail, but we may just mention one or two. An agenda always begins with ‘apologies for absence’ to let members know who is not able to be present and why. This is followed by the ‘minutes of the previous meeting’. In theory these are read out, but to save time, especially if the minutes have been circulated to members beforehand someone will move that ‘the minutes be taken as read.’ If this is agreed, we pass on to ‘matters arising,’ i.e. ‘matters arising from the minutes.’ For example, members might ask whether the family of a member of staff whose death in an accident had been reported at the last meeting had been taken care of. A short report of the action taken would then be given.

Dear Sir:

The chamber of Commerce’s announcement in its annual meeting on Saturday, October 20 to support all levels of education in the Cleveland area prompted me to write to you.

St. Benedict School has served the community for more than 50 years. With the vastly growing number of student body each year, we feel that our students need more facilities to facilitate their leaving. The immediate need which will be tremendously beneficial to all students is a literary expansion.

Since the project requires a large amount of funding, we believe that the Chamber of Commerce would take an initiative in organizing a fund-raising project. With your kind cooperation, we are certain that all businesses in the Cleveland area would strongly support this just cause.

We will highly appreciate your prompt action and look forward to hearing from you very soon.

Dear Mr. Jones :

Thank you very much for your letter of 2 May 1997 asking our advice on the location for your industry expansion. We would be pleased to say that our country has a very good location for setting up a plant such as yours. Besides, transportation and facilities are easily accessible and in many ways. The labor cost, moreover, is a very desirable one.

We have enclosed our city guide, the city map as well as useful information relating to the settlement of business and industry for your consideration.
We would be glad to supply more information it need be and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Shaw:

Thank you for giving me an opportunity to read your short story, “Country Rebels.” I have to admit that it is very well written. Ms. Shaw, the policy of our magazine is to publicize stories with non-violent and non-political issues since our target reader is young kids. Your short story strongly suggests some violence as well as political unrest which will create some disturbance to our accedes. As you can see then, ms. Shaw, we must unfortunately return your manuscript to you.

Your writing style is interesting and lively, and we are certain that some other publishers will agree. Therefore, we encourage you to submit your story to other magazines. We with you success with “Country Rebels.” We hope that you consider us again when you write your next story.
